

✓ VERIFIED REVENUE DATA

Who You Sell To Beats How You Price It

Founders are obsessed over pricing models and tiers.

We asked something simpler: does WHO you sell to matter more than HOW you price it?

About the Data :

1,000

Total SaaS companies analyzed in the database

656

Companies clearly tagged as B2B or B2C

100%

Stripe-verified data, zero self-reported claims

What is TrustMRR?

It's a database where startups connect their real Payment Gateways like Stripe (or similar) account, so their revenue shows up verified — not just claimed. That's why investors and buyers use it to check if a founder's numbers are actually true before they invest or acquire.

We pulled this same verified data and asked it a real question — not to sell a theory, but to see what it actually says.

The Core Question

Where should you INVEST? B2B vs B2C

B2B Startups

Group A

255

Companies selling directly to businesses, teams, and enterprises.

B2C Startups

Group B

401

Companies selling directly to individual consumers and prosumers.

We analyzed 656 verified companies to uncover which customer model yields superior revenue outcomes.

The Big Answer, Upfront

5.7x

B2B companies earn 5.7x more revenue than B2C companies

TYPICAL MONTHLY REVENUE

B2B Startups

$1,036 / mo

TYPICAL MONTHLY REVENUE

B2C Startups

$181 / mo

Show Me The Money

The revenue advantage holds true whether you look at a single month or an entire year.

Typical Monthly Revenue

B2B $1,036

B2C $181

Typical 12-Month Revenue

B2B $8,362

B2C $2,213

The gap is consistent over time — B2B outperforms B2C across both short-term monthly cash flow and full-year earnings.

Why Does This Happen?

It is not about having more customers. It is entirely about what each customer is worth.

Typical Revenue Per Customer Per Month

B2B Companies

$49.00 / mo

$49.00

B2C Companies

$9.34 / mo

$9.34

© B2B charges 5.2x more per customer. This pricing power alone drives the entire revenue gap.

The Other Side Of The Story

B2B wins on size, but B2C wins on speed — neither model is simply "better."

Average Monthly Growth Rate

B2C Companies

20.3% / mo

20.3%

B2B Companies

13.5% / mo

13.5%

B2C Speed Advantage

Consumer products experience faster initial month-to-month growth because friction is low, though they expand from a much smaller baseline.

B2B Scale Advantage

B2B grows somewhat slower in raw percentage terms, but every new business customer adds significantly more absolute cash flow.

What Happens When You Sell

Based on 224 real asking-price listings on TrustMRR marketplace.

Exit Price Multiple (Yearly Revenue Multiple)

B2B Companies

3.3x Yearly Revenue

3.3x

B2C Companies

2.9x Yearly Revenue

2.9x

Buyers do not discount B2B companies. The revenue advantage carries through fully when you sell the business.

So What Should You Do?

A practical decision framework for founders defining their target audience.

Build for businesses if...

- ✓ You can charge real per-seat or usage-based pricing.
- ✓ The buyer requires a demo, onboarding, or custom setup.
- ✓ You are comfortable building with fewer, higher-value customers.

Build for regular people if...

- ✓ Users can get started instantly with zero setup or human help.
- ✓ You are optimizing for rapid user volume and low friction.
- ✓ Your product spreads naturally from person to person.

Final Verdict

"Who you sell to matters more than how you price it."

PRACTICAL NEXT STEPS & INFERENCE

It's more sensible to choose B2B over B2C in the Startup SaaS space.

If customer could get real value from the product without months of setup — price it like a B2B product from day one.
