READING THE CHART

- AI alone ($1.8M MRR) outweighs SaaS, Education and Marketing combined.
- But size isn't the same as momentum — only 25% of AI companies grew MRR last month, well below several smaller categories.
- The next slide separates today's revenue leaders from tomorrow's growth leaders.

WHAT TO DO IN EACH QUADRANT

- STARS
Marketing, Education, Analytics, Social Media, E-comm
Reinvest aggressively — real revenue plus rising momentum.
- CASH COWS
AI, SaaS, Mobile Apps, Content Creation
Harvest efficiently — biggest revenue base, but growth has cooled.
- QUESTION MARKS
Dev Tools, Fintech
Selective bets — high momentum, still small. Back the leaders only.
- DOGS
Health & Fitness
Deprioritize unless a specific team or niche stands out.

Geography Is Not One-Size-Fits-All

Total MRR by Country (Top 8)

US carries 56% of all dataset MRR — scale lives there. France is a distant but real #2.

65 countries are represented in total, but the top 8 alone hold roughly 72% of all dataset MRR — revenue is geographically concentrated even though founders are not.

US

AI-led scale market

258 companies · 34.5% growing · top category: AI

Singapore

Concentrated B2B bet

78% B2B mix · 44% growing — highest of any major market

Brazil

Highest momentum, early stage

65% of companies grew MRR last month, led by Health & Fitness

TAKEAWAY: match the play to the place — defend scale in the US, follow the premium in Singapore, and scout Brazil early before it's crowded.

WHY THIS MATTERS FOR ALLOCATION

- B2B is 36% smaller in company count than B2C, yet holds 62% more total MRR ($3.35M vs $2.05M) — each B2B company is worth roughly 2.6x a B2C peer on average.
- B2B also grows more consistently: 41% of B2B companies added MRR last month vs 23% of B2C — a sign of stickier, budget-backed spend rather than impulse consumer purchases.
- Action: inside every "Star" category from the matrix, prioritize the B2B-flavored plays first — they carry the model's economics, not just the category's.

Underbuilt, Not Underwanted

Small Fields, High Momentum

WHY IT'S A WHITESPACE

- AI has 197 listed competitors. Customer Support has 5. Recruiting & HR has 6. That's not a lack of demand — it's a lack of builders.
- Customer Support already shows real willingness to pay: $13,786 average MRR per company, on par with Education and well above Marketing.
- Recruiting & HR has the single highest growth rate in the whole dataset — 83% of its (few) companies added MRR last month.
- No-Code and Marketplace are earlier-stage signals worth monitoring, not yet acting on.

RECOMMENDATION

Build or acquire an AI-native Customer Support / Recruiting copilot now, ahead of the crowding that already happened in AI and SaaS.

RECOMMENDATION

Action Plan: Next 12 Months

1

Harvest & Defend

AI + SaaS (Cash Cows)

Protect the $2.4M MRR base. Optimize monetization and retention rather than chasing new growth here.

2

Double Down

Marketing, Education, Analytics, Social Media, E-comm (Stars)

Direct fresh capital here first — real revenue and rising momentum together, especially the B2B-flavored plays.

3

Selective Bets

Dev Tools + Fintech (Question Marks)

Small but fast-growing. Back only the top-quartile teams with a clear wedge, not the category broadly.

4

Build New

Customer Support + Recruiting & HR (Whitespace)

Launch or acquire an early mover before these underbuilt, high-paying categories attract competition.
