

What's actually working in marketing tools right now

We looked at 158 marketing tools tracked by TrustMRR, a site that verifies real businesses by one number: MRR, or monthly recurring revenue - simply, how much money the tool is actually making every month.

WHY THIS ACTUALLY MATTERS TO YOU

Before you pay for a tool, know if it's actually real

As a marketer, you get pitched a new AI tool every week. Slick landing page, big promises, but no way to tell if it's a real business or two people and a demo. That's the gap this data fills.

TrustMRR connects to each tool's payment processor (like Stripe) and reads their MRR (Monthly Recurring Revenue) directly. It's the same number the founder sees on their own dashboard, not a number from their marketing page.

So before you shortlist a tool, here's what that real revenue data shows across the 158 marketing tools we looked at:

158

real marketing tools with verified MRR

6 in 10

of them lean on AI - it's normal now, not a bonus

1 in 3

are actually for sale right now, if you wanted to buy one

Most of these tools are small - and that's OK

Picture 10 marketing tools lined up. This is roughly how they'd split by how much money they bring in each month:

What this means for you: don't assume a tool is stable just because its website looks great. If it matters long-term, ask how long they've been growing.

WHO'S WINNING

Five tools that are actually making real money

Stack Influence	Connects brands with influencers automatically — no back-and-forth negotiating.	$10.5M / year
Cometly	Tells B2B companies which ads are actually driving sales, not just clicks.	$2.3M / year
GojiberryAI	An AI that finds people already looking to buy, and reaches out for you.	$1.5M / year
SEOBOT	Handles the busywork of SEO — keywords, content, links — on autopilot.	$1.0M / year
Indexsy	Old-school SEO done well: content and links that actually move rankings.	$0.8M / year

Three tools growing fast right now

These already have real customers — and are now growing quickly on top of that, not just starting from zero.

1

Backlinker AI

Automates getting other websites to link to yours - good for SEO.

Revenue nearly 6x'd in the last month

2

Speel.co

Handles social media posting and engagement on autopilot.

Revenue more than tripled last month

3

WaLead AI

Finds and qualifies sales leads automatically.

Revenue up
2.5x last month

A word of caution: fast growth on a small tool can flip just as fast. Worth watching, not yet worth betting everything on.

WHAT IT COSTS

What people actually pay for these tools

1

$29–$99 a month

The normal starting price for a solo marketer or small team. Most tools land here.

2

$300–$3,000 a month

For the tools that basically do the work for you — think outbound sales or local SEO, run like a service.

3

Try before you buy

Almost every tool offers a free trial or free tier. If one doesn't, that's worth asking about.

Rule of thumb: start with a $29–$99/month plan to test it out. Only move to the pricier “done for you” tier once you know exactly what you need.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Three things worth remembering

1 “Powered by AI” isn't special anymore

Most tools say it now. Judge them by what they actually do for you, not the label on the box.

2 Small doesn't mean bad — but check first

Plenty of great tools are still small. Just make sure they're growing before you depend on one.

3 You could buy one instead of building it

A third of these tools are for sale, usually for about 2–3 years of their revenue. Worth a look before building from scratch.