Where ₹10 Cr should go

B2B AI tools for marketing, SEO and content

The one corner of small software where small teams reliably reach real revenue:

sold to businesses, priced monthly, run by a handful of people.

$181

consumer apps

A business pays for a tool that makes it money. A consumer cancels it.
Same effort to build — roughly 6x the revenue per customer.

Share of companies earning $10,000+ a month

Marketing, education and content lead. Generic "AI apps" — the crowded bet — trail badly.

AI tools that get businesses found

Software that automates marketing, SEO and content work for other companies — the budget line a business protects even in a bad quarter.

Budget already there

Nobody needs convincing that marketing is worth paying for. You replace an agency retainer.

Results are visible

Rankings, leads, posts shipped. Value is visible on a dashboard, so renewals are an easy decision.

Tiny teams, real money

The leaders in this data run on a handful of people. Revenue scales without headcount.

AI cut the cost

Work that needed writers and analysts now runs on models — margin incumbents haven't priced in yet.

The bet is not "AI". It is AI pointed at the one job every business already pays a stranger to do.

Six unrelated teams, one field, $22k–$57k a month each. This is a repeatable outcome, not a lucky winner.

What the winners have in common

Strip away the branding and the successful companies in this field run the same four plays.

One narrow job, done completely

Backlinker AI sells one outcome at one price — $300/mo, nothing to configure. Narrow beats broad because the buyer understands it in ten seconds.

Sold to the people who resell it

RankAI's biggest line is agencies: they mark it up and bill their own clients. One signup brings a book of end customers with it.

A price ladder, not a price

LocalRank.so runs $57 to $2,997 a month. The same product earns 50x more from a chain than from a single shop — no extra build.

Fast movers are the small ones overrank SEO grew 91% and Local SEO Bot 49% in a single month at under $10k. Momentum lives at the entry point, which is where capital buys in cheapest.

what the best operator in this field bills today

Profitable tools are on sale right now

Owners in this field sell for a multiple of one year's revenue. Most ask around 5x — but real listings clear well under 1x.

COMPANY	WHAT IT DOES	MONTHLY REVENUE	ASKING PRICE	PRICE ÷ YEAR'S REVENUE
Videotok	AI video content	$4,731 /mo	$75,000	0.5x
ColdSire	Outbound sales tool	$18,887 /mo	$215,000	0.7x
Synta	B2B SaaS	$11,390 /mo	$100,000	0.9x
Backlinker AI	Backlink automation	$26,950 /mo	$350,000	1.1x
Marky	AI social content	$22,733 /mo	$495,000	1.7x

Buying a tool already billing $19k a month for $215k means the revenue pays the cheque back inside a year — then keeps paying.

Deploying ₹10 crore

₹6 Cr

ACQUIRE

Buy two or three tools already earning $15k-$30k a month, at close to one year's revenue. Revenue from day one.

₹3 Cr

BUILD

One new product aimed at agencies — the buyer who resells it and brings customers with them.

₹1 Cr

RESERVE

Held back to double down on whichever asset grows fastest after two quarters.

What we watch

- Search and AI platforms change the rules — so we buy tools with direct customer relationships, not traffic tricks.
- Crowded field — we only pay near 1x revenue, so a flat year still returns capital.
- Founder dependence — every deal includes a transition period and documented systems.

The one-line case

Buy proven revenue cheaply in the only small-software field where a third of operators clear $10k a month.
