Average MRR

Total Startups Analyzed: 1,000

Combined 30-Day Revenue: $15.6M

Currently Listed for Sale: 26%

Category Landscape: Crowded ≠ Profitable

	Volume (Number of Listings)	Value (Median MRR)
AI	197	$446
Education	Low competition	$2,141.50
Marketing	42	$1,586

Takeaway: AI has 3x more listings than any other category, but monetizes poorly. Capital flows most efficiently in under-crowded, high-utility sectors like Education and Marketing.

Geography: Value vs. Volume

Deep Value: High baseline revenue; US offers both depth and quality. | The Volume Trap: India is the second-highest volume driver globally, but yields the absolute lowest median MRR.
Strategic Takeaway: Anchor acquisitions and builds in the US market. Treat high-volume markets outside North America strictly as volume plays, not value drivers.

6 “Cheap + Growing”
Targets

The Filter Criteria

1. Payback period strictly under 12 months.
2. Active, positive MRR growth.

Strategic Takeaway: Ignore sticker price. Filter ruthlessly by payback period. These 6 targets clear their purchase price in under a year of current MRR.

Strategic Recommendations

Favor the B2B Premium

Target under-crowded, high-value categories. Education, Marketing, and Analytics generate the highest medians with a fraction of AI's competition.

Anchor in the US

The US is the only market that leads in both volume and median MRR. Treat secondary high-volume markets (India, France) strictly as volume plays, not value centers.

Screen on Payback

Ignore raw asking prices. Start diligence with the 6 listings showing under 12-month payback periods and active MRR growth before expanding the search.

Verify Before Acting: Marketplace status, pricing, and category tags shift rapidly. Treat this data as directional intelligence and re-verify MRR via Stripe prior to engagement.
